Faculty Scholarship

2010–2012
Our mission of combining theory and practice is perhaps best exemplified in the scholarly work of our faculty. Their work is concerned with the broad theoretical ideas that drive any discussion of law and justice, as well as the implementation of these ideas through the development of legal doctrine.

They have produced a remarkable collection of work on a wide range of topics, including Internet censorship, “copyfraud” and intellectual property law, terrorism, first amendment rights, tax policy, feminist jurisprudence, and religion and the law. Their areas of expertise include a broad mix of public and private domestic and international law, as well as many other disciplines.

I am proud of our faculty’s achievements and pleased to share them with you.
